From locks to modern electronic systems

CERTEGO dates back to the industrial lock business founded 150 years ago. The path to today's high-tech companies has been lined by a large number of corporate mergers and acquisitions across the Nordic region.

When we changed our name to CERTEGO in 2015, we chose the name from the Latin CERTUS, which means secure, and TEGO, which means to cover, protect and defend. The locks remain, but today security solutions typically involve electronics and system solutions.

Our operations are currently in Denmark, Finland, Norway and Sweden. Together we have a unique presence as a security solution provider.

CERTEGO offers help to all professionals involved in security solutions as part of their work, such as architects, developers, project managers and heads of security.

With over 1,200 employees at 80 locations, CERTEGO is a local partner with presence in the whole Nordic region. This means we can quickly be on site when necessary. You are safe and secure with us.

Creating a complete solution

When CERTEGO chooses a security solution together with you, we take into account how the various products work together in a complete system. How they meet different needs and requirements, and the security level that the business needs. The specifications go down to a detailed level that includes all components. With this approach, you gain early control of the budget in your future investment.

After the installation we'll continue to be there for you. We offer services to help with the administration, operation and hosting of your security system, or take care of the large key system and all of its keys. Quite simply, with our services you get high-security systems that are easy to operate, which means that you can confidently focus on daily operations.

We also offer customized service and support agreements. With many local branches, CERTEGO always has a technician close at hand to quickly be of service when you need help.
